Client Name	DN Creatine
Website	No Website yet
Video Explanation
Concept Name	MTRX_DNCR5_AI_SA_RSANM4
Awareness Level
Video Reference	https://drive.google.com/file/d/1vbE5SFXRNQE1fp7_ZKp8RnPREHpnRMuA/view?usp=sharing
Angle	Reverse Selling
Hypothesis (1-2 sentences max per section)	CONCEPT: A reverse-sell animated SONG with a male voice, targeting the older-male audience. The hooks dare you NOT to buy Nectar Creatine if you're fine with your pain points (weakness, your wife noticing younger men, no energy). The song is the man's own confessional story: his struggle, his wife drifting, the beers and the slump, his athlete son stepping in, the turnaround, and his wife's attention coming back. Entertainment and story first, with why Nectar Creatine woven through. WHY THIS WILL WORK: A sung thread is stickier than spoken VO and fits a daily-ritual product, the reverse-sell framing disarms skepticism, and the emotional arc (the wife, the slump, the son) lands harder than a flat pain-point song while leaning on our differentiated strength, energy and mental-sharpness angle for older men. LEARNING: Does an animated reverse-sell song anchored on men's mental sharpness and energy convert the older-male segment? FORMAT: ANM (animated song, male voice) NARRATIVE STYLE: Catchy sung thread, reverse-sell framing, confessional story, strength and cognition focused.
Creator Needed	N/A
Format	ANM
No. of Variants
Does this require AI Broll? If Yes, which?	Full AI

For Editors Only:	Editor Note Animated song in a similar style to the reference: (country American accent)

SCRIPT START
Hook 1: If you're happy being that one weak dad who can barely lift things without his back giving out, then creatine's not for you.	Setting: a family gathering. Show the older man (50s) reaching down to pick up a heavy object, straining, wincing, and having to set the child back down while he rubs his lower back. Reverse-sell dare tone.
SCRIPT:
Man, I was really struggling. Couldn't keep up with anything anymore. Winded on the stairs, too tired to spend time with my wife after work, just felt myself getting older and softer every month.	Show the man looking worn down in his everyday life: out of breath on the stairs, slumped and tired after work + his wife looking at him in the distance, disappointed. Keep it sympathetic.
And I started catching my wife looking at other guys. The fit ones. And I knew I wasn't that guy for her anymore.	Show the man noticing his wife's glance drift toward a fit younger man. Show his face fall. He feels like less than he used to be.
So I stopped trying. Started cracking a couple beers every night just to get through to bedtime. Felt myself sinking, and I let it happen.	Show the man alone on the couch at night with a couple of beers, the TV glow on his face, looking low. Show this as his low point, handled with care.
I thought that was just my life now. Getting old, fading out, nothing I could do about it.	Hold on the man looking defeated, like he's given up.
Then my son, who's a college football player, sat me down. Said, dad, this isn't age, your body just needs some fuel. And he handed me some Nectar Creatine.	Show his fit, athletic adult son sitting down with him, concerned, and handing him a Nectar Creatine packet. Show the packet clearly so we read the name.

He told me after forty your body loses creatine, the stuff your muscles and your brain run on. Said he takes it every single day, and so do his coaches who are my age and still keeping up with the kids on the field.	Show the athletic son explaining it to his dad. As he talks, show a simple graphic of creatine dropping after age 40 and little creatine sparks powering a muscle and a brain. Then cut to his coaches, men around the dad's age, out on the football field keeping up with the young athletes, looking strong and energetic.
He also said Nectar's a really good brand because their creatine's got zero sugar, zero calories, is non-GMO, and contains a bioavailability enhancer called BioPerine. And all I had to do was pour a packet in my water each morning.	Show the Nectar Creatine packet and variety pack clearly. As the son names each one, pop a simple on-screen callout timed to the line: Zero sugar, Zero calories, Non-GMO, and BioPerine (bioavailability enhancer). Then show the dad pouring a packet into his water in the morning.
So I did it. Figured I had nothing to lose.	Show the man pouring a Nectar Creatine packet into his water in the morning and drinking it.
First couple weeks, I started to notice little things. I wasn't getting winded on the stairs anymore. Started getting my mental sharpness back.	Show the man going up the stairs with ease, and looking more alert and focused through his day.
A month in, I'd get home from work and still have energy left. Started fixing things around the house again, playing catch with my grandkids outside, and the beers just stopped calling my name.	Show the man with energy in the evenings: fixing something around the house, playing catch with his grandkids in the yard. Show the beers sitting untouched, forgotten.
I felt stronger, sharper, and most of all, alive again. Feeling like the man she married.	Show the man standing taller, looking strong and energized, more like his old self.
And one night my wife looked at me and said, you look good lately. You seem like yourself again. Hadn't heard that in years. I knew the old me was back.	Show his wife looking at him warmly and complimenting him. Show the man's quiet, proud reaction. This callbacks the wife from the beginning.
So no. Don't buy it. Not if you've made peace with sitting on the sidelines while life goes on without you.	Reverse-sell button to the viewer. Keep the dare tone from the hook.
Nectar Creatine. For men who want a change.	Show the Nectar Creatine end card.